During the last half year we have been called quon to record the death of many of our promiapon to record the death of many of our promiment citizens.

We notice also the death of one who, though not resident among as since his early manhood, was well known in Richmond—his home during his boylesed and youth.

Many old friends remember with kindlest feelings WILLIAM EXALL, brother of our townsman Henry Exall.

Coming with his father's family from England when quite young, he remained among us until inst grown, when he returned to his native land on a visit, and by relatives and friends was persuaded to remain there and make it his home. He never revisited us, but friendly greetings have often crossed the occan to keep from menacies alive, and among us some recall with lively pleasure hospliable entertainment received at the hands of himself and family at his beautiful home on the Thames,

Trames.

From newspapers of his town of Rending we learn that he was honored and beloved, holding the highest office in the gift of the people, without remaneration, being their chief magistrate for years before and at the time of his death.

Prosperous in business, and of high schediffe knowledge, he used his means and telents liberally and meetilly, and as a true Christian, honoring his Maker.
